o Miss Mansfield, at her own request at the residence of June Wood, Thirty-fourth street, she was poor and told Miss Wood she had not a decent article of clothing. Fisk took a fancy to her and she became his mistress. The intimacy ripened into strong affection on his side.
At this juncture, Fisk and Stokes became intimate, The oil refinery, belonging to the latter's mother, was put in working order at Mr. Fisk's expense, and a company formed. Stokes was at first made treasurer of the company; but, having drawn out over thirty thousand dollars in the course of a few months, the company was reorganized, and he was appointed secretary of the new corporation From the new company he drew out ary 6, 1871, he collected twenty-seven thousand dollars of the company's claimed, was due to him. In one way or another with $130,000 more than he had when he went into it in the fall, all of which he derived directly from his relations with Fisk. Stokes in the meantime had been introduced to Miss Mansat whose house he spent days and nights. Fisk grew jealous, and Stokes swore he had no cause, but Fisk was not satisfied and sought to break up his connection with the woman, even though he did love her. He wrote fareweil letters to Josie, and when Fisk would repent and send her a present, and often sums of money. While she was thick with Stokes, Fisk was sending her money. Soon after then she would write a sweet reply, Fisk's letters to Stokes. Stokes at once saw that these letters were not letters that a married man should write to a woman other than his wife. He saw that there were personal matters that a man would write only to a woman whom he loves. He saw in them an opportunity to hold Fisk in his power. Stokes now gathered toon cards, and every word which Fisk had written to Josephine Mansfield. He even gathered scraps on cards which Fisk had written to this woman while sitting in the parlor waiting for her. Stokes then made out a claim for two hundred thousand dol.
